Rutland Community Center

Acceptance by the city of the Mead Community House as a gift from an anonymous donor provides the community with a recreation center which is badly needed.

Through the generosity of the donor, the transfer of title to the property from the Congregational Church to the city will be accomplished without cost after the voters rejected a proposal to purchase it last year.

During the period of earlier consideration of purchase of the property, there was evidence of some misunderstanding about the status of the property and its ownership. A number of letters indicated the mistaken belief that the property had been given to the community originally by the late John A. Mead.

Although the property has recently been owned outright by the Congregational Church, it was originally left in trust by Gov. Mead for use as a parish house by the church and as a community center for the city. Trust funds were also left by Mead for its operation and maintenance. These funds were supplemented by the Congregational Church.

As intended by its original donor, the Community House served for many years as a community center open to all faiths and denominations and was extensively used in that manner. As other churches and faiths provided their own facilities, its use changed. In its day it served a useful purpose socially and in recreation until there was a reaction against utilizing as a community center a facility with such close ties to one church.

A few years ago the Congregational Church decided to give up its use of the Community House as a parish house. Congregationalists built an addition on their church for Sunday School and parish house purposes. This had the effect of terminating the Mead trust, as a result of which the property was deeded to the Congregational Church to be disposed of as it wished. The building was immediately offered to the city and will now be turned over to the city through the generous intervention of a helpful donor.

Thus the Community House will continue to serve, as it did for so many years in the past, as a community center for Rutland except that henceforth it will be city owned and part of the municipal recreation program.

A Rutland attorney was revealed Monday as the philanthropist who purchased Mead Community House for use as a community recreation center.

"Atty. Lawrence made these funds available to the city for the primary purpose of making the city's children better citizens by having a place in which they can have wholesome activities and pleasure and to supplement their education by use of the nearby library facilities," stated Mayor Daley.

Announcement that Edwin W. Lawrence is the donor of the city's new recreation center should come as no surprise to those aware of his many other acts of generosity, often in support of projects helping and encouraging young people of the state.

But whether surprised or not, the citizens of Rutland are undoubtedly deeply thankful to the donor and desirous that it may become, as he hopes, a real community center of recreation. We are sure the impos to give it his name will have wide support.

Community House Given To Rutland Anonymously

Donor Buys Mead Facility at Center and Court Sts. From Congregational Church; Aldermen, Mayor Accept With Deep Gratitude.

By JOSEPH COURCELLE

Mayor John J. Daley told the Board of Aldermen Monday that an anonymous donor has purchased Mead Community House from the Congregational Church and has given it to the city.

The "outright gift" of the structure at Center and Court Sts. was unanimously accepted, with deep thanks, by the board.

Daley referred to the donation as "one of the finest things that has happened to this city in many years."

He lauded the donor who, he said, wished to remain anonymous until all business in the transaction has been completed.

Daley also was emphatic in his appreciation to the Congregational Church, which made the building available to the donor.

The members of the Congregational Church met Monday evening and approved sale of the Mead Community building to the unnamed buyer.

Alderman John A. Mullen requested the building be renamed from "Mead Community Center," to bear the name of the donor, providing the donor agrees.

The building was willed by the late Gov. John A. Mead to the church. The church members recently constructed an addition to their own edifice, and did not need the Community House.

The city attempted to purchase the building by a bond issued in the elections last September. The price at that time was $30,000, and was defeated.

Recreation Commissioner John W. Cioffredi was a very delighted man Monday evening.

Describing his feeling as "tremendous thrill," Cioffredi commented: "I personally wish to express my deep appreciation to Mayor Daley, who took up the struggle and who achieved this wonderful thing, on his own."

The donor stipulated that, if the city found no use for the building as a recreation center in the future, then it was to be sold and the proceeds were to be given to the Rutland Free Library Association.

The center was a highly controversial topic in the September elections. The issue was defeated by a small margin by voters who turned out in few numbers.

Prior to the election, the city approved an appropriation for renovations and maintenance of the building, in the event the proposed purchase was favored by the voters.

However, Daley said Monday that the appropriation for the maintenance of the Mead Community Center is still available.

The Recreation Department will begin moving to the new quarters immediately, the mayor said. Cioffredi said:

"I personally will strive to justify the faith put in me with my best efforts in operating the center."

Cioffredi, a strong supporter of purchase of the building in the last elections, often commented on the city's need for proper facilities.

He stated: "After the defeat in the last election by just a small voting group, our spirits were dampened. But we picked up our heads and continued to do the best we could with what we had."

Daley said the Recreation Department's change from its present office in City Hall to the Mead Center would be a gradual process.

He said the city will have to schedule carefully the list of other activities and organizations making use of Rutland's new piece of property.

B & B, Palms Hoop Victors In Adult Loop

B & B Diner of Castleton and Palms Restaurant emerged victorious in Adult Recreation League action Wednesday night at the Rutland High gym.

In the first tilt B & B registered a 67-30 decision over the Rutland Aces. Ray Mariani, Phil Joachim (15) and Jim Averill (12) led the winners. Bill Paskevich's 11 markers showed the way for an outmanned Aces squad.

In the nightcap Joe Bizzarro (19), Ron Richards (14), John Notte (13) and Jim Browne (11) paced Palms to a 66-57 win over Mount Holly. Tom Perrino and Bill Olney led the losers in the scoring department with 16 and 10 points, respectively.

Courses could be run daytime or evening. However, interest must be shown to start an program rolling, said Cioffredi.

A committee met with Cioffredi to plan the program for the fifth annual Vermont Teen Congress which will be held in Stowe on Saturday, March 29-31. The congress is co-sponsored by the Vermont [illegible] Association and the Vermont Recreation Society.

The workshop which will be open to all area leaders and workers in the field of recreation will offer an opportunity for them to participate in practical demonstrations of leadership ideas, party starters, mixers, dramatics and simple folk and square dances.

The workshop is sponsored by the Rutland Recreation Department; State Board of Recreation and the Vermont Federation of Women's Clubs.

The workshop will be divided into two sessions. The first from 3 to 5 p.m., the second from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Cioffredi reported the meeting will be an excellent medium for getting help with techniques in the planning of organized recreation.

Mrs. Urner will also appear at other Vermont community gatherings, concerned with recreation next week.

~~Square Dance~~ Is Scheduled Here Tonight

Bob Brundage of Danbury, Conn., will call for the Rutland Square Dance Club at Southeast School Saturday from 8 to 11 p.m., it was announced by John W. Cioffredi, recreation commissioner.

Brundage, who was one of the callers at the New England square dance festival in Rutland in August, 1960, has been calling since he was 10 years old, and started calling regularly at the age of 16.

He was able to earn extra money during his college days with his square dance calling and, while he is now a life insurance sales representative, most of his spare time is spent calling for square dances. Brundage has called for square dances from coast to coast and, in 1956, appeared on the Arthur Godfrey television show.

He is currently caller and teacher for square dance clubs in Milford and Woodbury, Conn. and Westfield, Mass., and each May conducts a "square dance weekend" at Grand Lake Lodge, Lebanon, Conn.

"His popularity has resulted in his being scheduled for two or three dances each year in Rutland for the past several years," said Cioffredi.

Bob Romano will direct the Rutland Recreation Department's summer tennis program for the third straight year.

City's Tennis Program Will Open June 24

The Rutland Recreation Department announced Wednesday its summer tennis program would be conducted for the third straight year and will include three major tournaments.

Bob Romano, 24-year-old graduate of Stonehill College, will head the program for the third time.

Free tennis lessons will begin June 24 for beginners and advanced players. They are open to anyone in the seventh grade or older.

The tournament dates are: for junior men (18 and under) on July 12-13; men's singles (ages 18-45) starts on July 26; and men's doubles (for all ages) starts on Aug. 9. Women have not indicated enough interest for tournaments to be scheduled for them, the department said.

There will be special lessons for college students and adults in the evenings with instructions to range from fundamentals to complexities of doubles play.

The department said classes will be limited to permit extra attention to the individual and noted that private lessons can be arranged.

Registration dates are anytime before June 21 at the Recreation Center or at the White Playground on June 24 in the morning. Lessons and tournaments will be open to all area residents and summer residents.

Romano noted that interest in tennis has grown rapidly in the past two years. "This summer we will see an even larger number of players using our courts," he said. "Tennis is a game for old and young. We hope our program will add to the physical fitness and enjoyment of people in the community."

Romano was born in Newark, N. J., but has lived here for seven years. At Stonehill he competed for the tennis team four seasons and was selected as captain.

Sports Spotlight

By BILL WINTERS
Herald Sports Editor

A committee meeting was held Wednesday evening in the recreation office at City Hall in regards to semi-pro football action and it was decided to form an organization with a general manager and a board of directors.

A meeting will be held Nov. 16 at 7:30 p.m. at the recreation office for all persons interested in semi-pro football for the area and an election of officers will be held.

Present at Wednesday's meeting was Ebba St. Claire, former major league baseball player and all-sports star at Whitehall, N.Y., High School during his hey-day.

Ebba expressed his interest in helping to initiate a program such as mentioned above and offered various suggestions on the organizing of a team.

One point brought up at the committee meeting was "would there be enough players who would want to compete from the Rutland, West Rutland, Castleton, Poultney and Fair Haven areas"!

Many at the meeting were sure there would be enough players but something more concrete than speculation should be evidenced in this subject and it is time for ex-athletes in the area to speak up. Therefore, this writer would appreciate it if all interested parties in the aforementioned program would send a letter to the Herald Sports Dept. indicating their support.

Also, it is well known that more than just player support is needed to make a go of a program such as this and that a definite show of community interest must be involved.

It is high time that the area moves away from the period of stagnation that has enveloped it in regards to sports on anything above the high school level in recent years.

It wasn't so many years back that the Rutland Royals were making high on the baseball scene in the area but a lack of fan interest killed off this fine brand of baseball.

Through a more vigorous sports program in the area a number of things can be accomplished. One is that it would be a boon to making people aware of the value of physical fitness. A second is that it would forestall somewhat the madness of automation which makes anything above watching a sport on TV "hard labor."

These women shown are just some of the 35 ladies in attendance Wednesday afternoon at the Bowlerama where Recreation Dept. sponsored course in bowling is held in conjunction with the owners of the establishment. The course is designed to promote physical fitness and to acquaint the ladies with the sport of bowling by the help of certified bowling instructors who give lectures, individual instruction and show slides on the correct way to bowl.

Free Course On Bowling For Women

Rutland Recreation Department had come up with another first in helping to promote a physical fitness program for the city as it now has organized a women's bowling instruction course, in conjunction with the Bowlerama, to provide the ladies with a couple of hours of fun and relaxation plus learning the great sport of bowling.

Topping all this off is that a baby-sitting service is also provided so ladies with children can take advantage of this course. At the present time a total of 35 women attend the free classes which are held every Wednesday from 1-3 p.m.

Films are shown explaining the correct ways to bowl and certified instructors are on hand to go through dry runs with the ladies before they actually bowl for score.

Besides the film aids for bowlers there is also individual instruction given to each and every woman with various mistakes pointed out and corrected.

Each week a certain phase of the sport is covered by one of the three instructors, Clem Forte, Larry Muzzi and Mrs. Rose Fuller.

Recreation Director John Ciofreddi reports that interest in the program among the housewives in the city has been growing rapidly and he hopes that more women will take advantage of the free lessons and baby-sitting and get out for an afternoon of relaxation as well as physical exercise.

Longfellow Land Need Expressed

School Board Passes Motion; Urban Renewal Director Speaks.

The Rutland School Board Tuesday night passed unanimously a motion to make clear its intention to use over two acres of land for expansion of Longfellow School on Church St. under the urban renewal plan.

The motion was taken from a letter submitted by Donald A. Perkins, chairman of the Building Committee for Schools and adopted by the school board.

The letter expressed interest in the effect urban renewal would have on Longfellow School.

School board members said they were definitely interested in securing more land for Longfellow for additional construction and an adequate play area. It was stated that all available land adjacent to the school and coming within the urban renewal project area must be secured.

During the [illegible] meeting, Daniel W. Alfeo, [illegible] director of the Rutland Urban Renewal Project and S. Robert Caso, a planning consultant representing Ebasco Services Inc., of New York City, outlined details of Longfellow School expansion.

Allen stated that the "large two acre recreation area would be a good sized playground" and could serve nearby Immaculate Heart of Mary School, as well as Longfellow, for summer recreation. He emphasized that Longfellow School would then have a badly needed playground.

Also included in the plans, Allen pointed out, would be the relocation of the school entrances to Elm St., the creation of a possible parking area and possible school plant expansion.

At the expense of the urban renewal project, the land will be acquired and cleared, then made available to the city for school purposes at a much reduced cost than if acquired without such assistance.

Allen pointed out that the school expansion would be a part of the whole urban renewal package plan to be presented to the voters at a later date.

Caso emphasized that the amount of money spent for the new entrances to Longfellow School and the land acquisition would have to be determined by further study.

Homer B. Ashland, superintendent of schools, noted that in the future school district boundaries might be changed to relieve other overcrowded school districts.

Perkins expressed his enthusiasm over the expansion of the school and the possibility of a large recreation area.

When asked about the new playground, John W. Cioffredi, recreation director said, "I thing every school should have a good playground. The present facilities at Longfellow are not adequate, and the playground exit on Church St. is dangerous. The new playground, with relocated entrances could also be used by a large number of neighborhood children."

Arthur H. Ross, president of the board, presided at the meeting.

Sports Spotlight

Dan Kennedy, valuable league supervisor of the Rutland Recreation Department, announced Tuesday evening to this reporter that he has accepted a position as director of recreation in Old Greenwich-Riverside, Conn.

Kennedy will assume his new position June 10 and as soon as things can be arranged will move his family — his wife, Frances, and son, Daniel II—to Old Greenwich with him. Another is expected in October.

Dan, who spent four years in the Rutland Recreation Department, will graduate from Castleton State College this year.

He spent one year in the Dodgers' baseball chain at Hornell, N.Y., Class D Pony League, after graduating from Rutland High School.

He then went into the service for two years, serving with the U.S. Army in Germany where he first became interested in the recreation supervision field.

His new post will be as overseer of personnel at the Old Greenwich Recreation Department, but Kennedy says he still hopes to have time to get out and take an active part in many of the program.

It is with mixed emotions that we wish Dan well in his new job. It is always rewarding to see a deserving person move up the ladder of life, but at the same time it is sad to see a useful person leave the community.

Dan turned in a tremendous job in supervising the youngsters of our city, and it is they who have profited most from his dedication to sports and an energetic physical fitness program.

The entire Rutland Recreation Department comes in for a pat on the back, and we hope it can progress even more.

So this columnist would like to thank Dan for the fine job he has done. We are sure the same wish is expressed by the many fathers and mothers who have had children play under his supervision. Best of luck!
